

Abstract

Disclosed is a multilayer printed board to be provided with electronic components, which has at least one layer whose thermal expansion behavior corresponds approximately to the thermal expansion behavior of the electronic components while at the same time substantially determining the thermal expansion behavior of the multilayer printed board.